Chapter 3 Summary

In this spirited chapter, we dive into the festive chaos of the Griswold Family Christmas reunion at the opulent Pennington mansion. The event teems with vibrant personalities, including a host of enthusiastic authors and the elaborate holiday decorations that frame their interactions. Our protagonist, Savannah, is particularly keen for this day as she has a company card that allows her to treat the quirky author Oswald to a day of exploration and dining—an opportunity she has been eagerly anticipating.

As Savannah navigates the festive atmosphere, she encounters her boss, Giselle, whose overly enthusiastic interaction with the well-known Instagram influencer Delilah Ray reveals her insecurities and her underlying disdain for Savannah. This sets up a stark contrast between the social finesse exuded by others and Oswald's endearing yet awkward persona. Despite his brilliance in writing, Oswald struggles with everyday social interactions, humorously depicted as he inadvertently stifles conversations with his hesitant and quiet responses.

When Savannah tries to connect with Oswald and plan their day, she learns that he is fasting, complicating her desire to indulge in a good meal. This

Their plans are further interrupted by William Pennington, the newly appointed Vice President, who inadvertently adds to Savannah's anxiety about making a good impression while also advocating for Oswald's unconventional choice of activity—visiting a sensory deprivation float tank.

As Savannah and William engage in a witty exchange about their differing literary tastes, the playful banter belies the mounting pressure Savannah feels. What should have been a delightful day of culinary exploration is turning into an uncomfortable adventure that culminates in her reluctant agreement to enter the float tank.

The float tank experience is anything but relaxing for Savannah, filled with her nagging worries about her manuscript and the overwhelming chaos of the upcoming banquet. By the end of this surreal day, she returns to the office late, eager to finalize her work. If only it were that simple—she discovers her manuscript is now filled with alterations and notes from someone else, leaving her bewildered and anxious. This revelation foreshadows potential conflicts and challenges in her evolving role as both an editor and an aspiring author.
