About the book

In "We Three Kings" by Alice May Ball, the holiday season takes an unexpected turn when three rugged mafia kings decide to step in as Santas for a local charity party. Each king, known for their toughness and charm, is drawn to the vibrant and determined party organizer, Tinka Belle, who is dedicated to spreading joy to underprivileged children.

As Tinka tirelessly works to make the event a success, she remains blissfully unaware that this season will offer her more than just the joy of giving. The kings, behind their Santa suits, each harbor a desire for her, promising a night filled with surprises and forbidden desires. Their playful interactions with Tinka bring a blend of audacious fun and romance that transforms the annual charity event into a magical adventure.

This heartwarming and cheeky tale captures the essence of the holiday spirit while intertwining it with themes of longing and the excitement of new romance. As Tinka unwittingly unravels the kings' affections, readers are invited to explore the boundaries of holiday cheer, leading to a delightful conclusion that ensures both fun and happily-ever-afters for all involved. Get ready for a festive romp that redefines the joys of Christmas!

About the author

Alice May Ball was a groundbreaking American chemist and educator, born in 1892 in Seattle, Washington. Her pivotal contributions to medicine in the early 20th century reshaped the treatment of leprosy through her innovative "Ball Method." This technique revolutionized the administration of chaulmoogra oil, a traditional remedy for leprosy that had been used for centuries, making it more effective and less painful for patients.

In 1915, Alice made history as the first woman and first African American to earn a degree in chemistry from the University of Hawaii. Her accomplishment came at a time when opportunities for women and people of color in science were limited, highlighting her role as an important figure in both academia and medicine. Ball's research not only advanced medical knowledge but also challenged the prevailing norms of her era, paving the way for future generations of scientists.

Tragically, Alice May Ball passed away at the young age of 24, yet her legacy continues to impact the fields of chemistry and medicine today. Her trailblazing spirit and dedication to science exemplify the significant contributions that women of color have made, and continue to make, in shaping our understanding of health and disease.

Chapter 1 Summary

Setting the Scene

As the holiday season blankets New York City in Christmas cheer—complete with carolers, Santa Claus figures, and twinkling decorations—the narrator offers a stark contrast. He reflects on a bleak childhood in Hell's Kitchen, marked by poverty, a tumultuous family life, and a relentless fight for survival amidst the vibrant festivities.

Struggles of Childhood

The narrator describes his upbringing in a large family facing financial hardship, with his mother tirelessly striving to provide for her children. Her sacrifices instilled in him a sense of resilience, shaping his character as he navigated the challenges of his early life.

Confrontation with Cesare Spinelli

In a bid to protect his family, the narrator confronts the notorious loan shark, Cesare Spinelli. Prepared for a violent encounter, he opts for negotiation instead, marking a pivotal moment in his life. This decision leads him to become Cesare's enforcer, entangling him further in the web of organized crime.

Rise to Power

Years of loyalty and service culminate in a dramatic turning point when the narrator assassinates Cesare and assumes control of his criminal empire. He swiftly consolidates a range of illicit enterprises, establishing himself as a significant figure within New York's underworld.

Philanthropy and Secrecy

Despite his involvement in crime, the narrator retains a compassionate side, particularly towards underprivileged children during the holiday season. He anonymously supports charitable initiatives, striving to keep his benevolence hidden from the public eye, contrasting sharply with his criminal activities.

Introduction of Tinka Belle

In December, the narrator discovers Tinka Belle, a dedicated librarian engaged in charity work. He finds himself captivated by her, viewing her as a beacon of the joy and warmth he longs for amidst his shadowy existence.

Desire and Fantasy

As he reflects on past infatuations, particularly with a Sunday school teacher, he draws parallels to his fascination with Tinka. This longing intertwines with the spirit of the season, igniting new ambitions and aspirations that stand in stark contrast to his ongoing illicit dealings. The narrator's infatuation with Tinka serves as a catalyst for his desire to change, establishing a complex interplay between his aspirations and his current lifestyle.

Chapter Two Summary: Winter Wonderland

In a picturesque winter landscape, children frolic in the snow, their laughter and joyous play embodying the festive spirit of the season. This enchanting scene serves as a backdrop for the protagonist, who feels a heightened sense of responsibility as they embark on a significant mission: to create a memorable Christmas celebration for underprivileged children. The stark contrast between the blissful chaos of the snowy playground and the protagonist's own barren apartment deepens their commitment to this cause.

As the protagonist navigates the snowy streets in their compact Honda, they find comfort in the car's cozy interior, a refuge from the cold, yet anxiety looms over an impending meeting with a formidable sponsor. The protagonist's mind races with doubts and desires as they wrestle with feelings of inadequacy. Despite the warmth of the Honda, the chill of reality sets in, reminding them of the magnitude of the challenge ahead.

The roads prove treacherous, forcing the protagonist to drive carefully as they mentally juggle the many tasks needed to prepare for the sponsorship meeting. The urgency of finalizing the venue and securing funds hangs over them like a heavy snowfall, yet it only strengthens their resolve. Each obstacle becomes a stepping stone in their journey, bringing clarity to their purpose.

With a fierce commitment to help those in need, the protagonist is undeterred in their quest to organize a Christmas party for thirty deserving children. They envision an event filled with joy, laughter, and lasting memories, a bright light in a year that has been particularly hard for these kids. This mission transforms into a beacon of hope, driving the protagonist to seek every available resource and support to make this dream a reality.

Setting the Scene

The chapter unfolds in a cozy, dimly lit bar in New Orleans, where the air is thick with the sounds of an enchanting performance by Sandrine LaFleur, a gifted singer known for her powerful voice and emotional delivery. The lively ambiance, typically a blend of music and laughter, draws Danny in, enhancing his contentment with life in this vibrant city, especially during the festive holiday season.

Danny's Distraction

As Danny enjoys the show, his attention drifts as he checks updates on his phone. He feels a deep sense of belonging in New Orleans, immersed in the rich local culture of music and cuisine. The peace he has experienced, devoid of gang conflicts that plague other areas, adds to his current joy, making the upcoming holidays feel even more special.

Unexpected News

Danny's focus is sharp as he searches for news about two trucks traveling from Canada—an issue he is closely monitoring. However, a touching segment about a charity event for disadvantaged children suddenly captures his attention. It fills him with pride to see the city's charitable spirit flourishing during the Christmas season, reminding him of the warmth and community that characterize this time of year.

A Surprising Interview

His attention shifts when he encounters an interview with a striking woman who appeals for help with a personal cause. Her authenticity and the urgency of her situation resonate deeply with Danny, sparking both attraction and a desire to assist her.

Making a Quick Decision

The realization of his impulse hits him hard, prompting Danny to swiftly abandon his seat at the bar. When the bar manager, Ida, inquiries about his plans for hiring the band, he brushes her off with a casual response, prioritizing the woman in need over any business concerns. In an uncharacteristic yet spontaneous move, he exits the bar and heads to the airport, driven by a newfound sense of purpose.

Chapter 4 Summary

In this chapter, Tinka experiences an intense wave of anxiety as she prepares for a pivotal meeting with a significant mob figure. This nervousness is intensified by the unconventional name given to her by her father, which has always set her apart and contributed to her feelings of unease in social settings. Historically, Tinka has struggled with anxiety in interactions, but today, the stakes feel much higher due to the risky nature of her upcoming encounter.

Giorgio, Tinka's supportive best friend, attempts to lift her spirits with encouraging words, even playfully suggesting that there might be romantic possibilities in her meeting. However, Tinka is resolute in her decision to remain single, having endured a string of heartbreaks that she refuses to let derail her enjoyment of the holiday season.

As Tinka grapples with her nerves, she entertains vivid fantasies of being desired and assertive, revealing an underlying yearning for intimacy despite her strong resolve to avoid any romantic entanglements. This internal conflict highlights her desire for connection while simultaneously craving distance from the complications of love.

Tinka's anxiety culminates as she arrives at the Greenmeadow Orphanage and Care Center, a place marked by its austere and bleak environment. The orphanage, with its dilapidated hallways and the cacophony of the children's voices, reflects the harsh realities faced by its young residents.

Despite the grim setting, Tinka interacts warmly with the children in the mess hall, striving to bring joy and festive spirit to their lives. She is determined to create a memorable Christmas for them, seeking to uplift their hearts amid the challenges they face. This commitment to the children underscores Tinka's compassionate nature and her desire to make a positive impact, even when confronted with her own insecurities.

Chapter 5 Summary:

In Chapter 5, the protagonist Drago, a hardened Sicilian recently arrived in a small town for a drug deal, grapples with his aversion to Christmas. Despite the town's festive atmosphere, marked by decorations and celebrations, Drago's disdain for the holiday is palpable. However, his demeanor begins to shift when he encounters a lively "bouncy Christmas angel," a woman who embodies the joyous spirit he loathes. This unexpected attraction forces him to confront his feelings as he reflects on the innocence of his own childhood.

During his time in the town, Drago's path crosses with a local biker from a gang, who suspiciously questions his purpose there. The confrontation escalates as they discuss the deal he plans to make, heightening the tension. Yet, amid the hostility, Drago's attention is diverted by the blonde woman, the Christmas angel, whose presence captivates him and softens his swagger.

In a flirtatious exchange with the woman, Drago showcases his intriguing duality—he's both tough and unexpectedly warm-hearted. As he shares stories from his childhood in Sicily, revealing his past experiences and regrets, Drago's facade begins to crack. This makes him more relatable and hints at the complexities of his character, suggesting that beneath his tough exterior lies a man yearning for connection.

The chapter concludes with a suggestive interaction between Drago and the

Chapter 6 Summary:

In Chapter 6, the protagonist, Tinka, finds herself irresistibly attracted to a mysterious and intimidating man while waiting outside a hardware store for children she looks after. This chapter explores the complex interplay of desire and fear, as Tinka struggles with her instinctive attraction against her better judgment.

Having had tumultuous experiences with men in the past, Tinka reflects on the risks associated with succumbing to temptation. The man approaches Tinka, offering her financial help, but with the caveat that it would involve intimacy. Tinka faces an internal battle between the exhilaration of the moment and her responsibilities toward her charges. Although she is initially hesitant, her curiosity and longing compel her to follow him into a dimly lit alley. Their encounter takes an unexpected turn when they are confronted by a group of aggressive bikers, showcasing the man's assertiveness and evoking both admiration and fear in Tinka.

As their interaction progresses, Tinka grapples with her conflicting emotions of desire and the need to maintain control over her life. This intense moment escalates into passionate intimacy, representing her internal conflict between longing and self-preservation. Ultimately, Tinka reaches a breaking point, succumbing to her desires and allowing her vulnerability to guide her actions. This chapter encapsulates her struggle, highlighting the complexities

Chapter 7 Summary:

In Chapter 7, Tinka finds herself grappling with the aftermath of a thrilling yet disquieting encounter with a mysterious biker in a dark alley. The chemistry between them leaves her both exhilarated and apprehensive, highlighting her desire for excitement alongside her wariness about the unknown. After their passionate meeting, the biker playfully invites her to dinner at the Hollybush Diner, presenting himself whimsically as "Santa." Despite her teasing objections, Tinka agrees, insisting he come prepared with money, which adds a layer of playful banter to their budding connection as they exchange phone numbers.

Upon her arrival at Clarkson's Hardware, Tinka is welcomed by a lively group of children eagerly anticipating her return. Engaging with them brings a lightness to her day; however, her interactions with Mr. Benchmaier, the store clerk, quickly turn sour. She faces difficulties in acquiring supplies for the children, especially since Mr. Clarkson, the store owner, wishes to meet her personally, which adds to her mounting frustration with the men in her life. The stark contrast between the charming biker and Mr. Clarkson's demeanor only deepens her irritation.

As Tinka prepares for an upcoming meeting with the bishop, she takes a moment to advise the children about the importance of effective collaboration and attentive listening during the process. Sensing their enthusiasm, she encourages one child's idea of acting as "reporters" or "spies," underscoring the necessity for secrecy. This instills a sense of importance in their mission while revealing Tinka's underlying mistrust of the bishop, whom she feels they need to navigate carefully. This chapter thus marks a turning point for Tinka, balancing themes of attraction, frustration, and strategic planning in her journey forward.

Chapter 8:

In Chapter 9, Tinka, a compassionate advocate for disadvantaged children, seeks assistance from a local bishop to secure funding for those in need. However, she learns the disappointing news that the bishop's diocese has exhausted its financial resources for the year. Despite his outwardly sympathetic demeanor, the bishop serves the children a mundane meal that they find unappetizing. His primary concern appears to be garnering favorable media attention, leaving Tinka feeling skeptical about his true motivations.

When the bishop offers Tinka a private audience, she instinctively senses ulterior motives and declines to leave the children in his care, determined to protect them. The tension between their interests escalates, as Tinka prioritizes the children's safety over the bishop's insincere assurances. After the children reluctantly return to the orphanage, Tinka is filled with a sense of disappointment and despair.

As she navigates her frustrations, Tinka crosses paths with a large, charismatic stranger who greets her warmly in French, endearingly calling her "cher." His compliments on her efforts and beauty both flatter and unsettle her, leaving Tinka feeling exposed under his flirtatious gaze. This encounter adds an intriguing layer to the chapter, as it introduces a potential ally or adversary in Tinka's ongoing struggle for the welfare of the children.

Chapter 9 Summary:

In Chapter 9, Danny finds himself captivated by Tinka as he observes her nurturing demeanor with children. This sparks within him the longing for fatherhood and a vision of a future together. Inspired by her kindness, he feels a strong urge to assist her, particularly with organizing a children's party. Danny employs flirtatious language as he offers not just financial support but emotional investment, aiming to strengthen their budding connection.

Their interaction is filled with playful banter and mutual teasing, creating an undeniable chemistry that leaves Tinka both intrigued and somewhat flustered by Danny's bold approach. As Tinka prepares for a meeting with potential sponsors for her charitable initiatives, Danny encourages her to focus on their growing romance instead, showcasing his desire to play a significant role in her life and the lives of the children they both care about.

The chapter paints a picture of a blossoming romance, underscored by Danny's affectionate nickname for Tinka, which he playfully dubs her "Christmas fairy." As the chapter closes, it emphasizes their emotional bond and Danny's commitment to being a meaningful part of their lives, setting the stage for deeper developments in their relationship.

Summary of Chapter 11: Tinka

The Transformation of Tinka's Circumstances

In this chapter, Tinka reflects on a significant change in her life. Previously, she struggled to secure support for her children's project, facing resistance and indifference. However, her current situation involves newfound attention from the men in her town, who are now genuinely interested in her work and willing to invest financially, marking a stark contrast to her earlier challenges.

Arrival at the Mansion

Tinka arrives at an imposing mansion for a pivotal meeting, feeling an unsettling quiet that surrounds the grand estate. The only other vehicle she notices is a sleek Bentley, emphasizing the wealth of the gathering. Despite her trepidation about fitting into this world, she steels her resolve and approaches the heavy front door, prepared to confront whatever awaits her inside.

Upon entering, Tinka is greeted by Carmine Monreale, a dashing and smooth-talking man. His charismatic presence instantly sparks chemistry between them, igniting a mix of excitement and nervousness within her. As he offers drinks and engages her in lively conversation, Tinka finds herself both anxious and comforted by his charm, epitomizing the rollercoaster of her emotions in this high-stakes environment.

The Invitation to Collaborate

As Tinka shares her struggles, Carmine's interest becomes increasingly intense, bordering on obsessive. His proposal for a partnership hints at underlying motivations that make Tinka uneasy. Despite her attraction to him, she is acutely aware of the duality in their interaction—his charm accompanied by a relentless ambition, leading her to question his true intentions.

Negotiations and Tension

The dialogue shifts to financial discussions, where Tinka reveals she has more lucrative offers in hand, altering the dynamics of their negotiation. Carmine's demeanor changes, introducing tension as they both navigate their conflicting interests. ## Chapter 11 Summary:

In Chapter 12, the tension between Carmine and Tinka deepens as they share an intimate moment, highlighting the strong attraction that pulls them together. Carmine expresses his commitment to fulfilling Tinka's needs, positioning himself as her protector and provider, which underlines his desire for exclusivity in their relationship. Despite the urgency surrounding their connection, Tinka suggests the possibility of including other men in their arrangement. However, Carmine firmly rejects this idea, wanting Tinka solely for himself.

Their interaction evolves into a passionate exchange where Tinka takes on a dominant role, expressing her desires and pushing for a more fulfilling connection with Carmine. The intensity of their physical chemistry underscores themes of possession and longing, as they navigate their desires and vulnerabilities.

During this encounter, Carmine goes beyond the financial support initially discussed, but he makes it clear that Tinka must fully commit to him. Tinka, on the other hand, asserts her independence and the importance of making her own choices in their evolving dynamic. This chapter encapsulates their struggle between desire, control, and the complexities of building a meaningful relationship amidst intense emotional stakes.

Chapter Summary: Tinka's Reunion with Friends

In this chapter, Tinka reaches out to her friends, Drago, a rugged biker known for his intensity, and Danny, who shares a close bond with her, inviting them to join her for a gathering. When Drago arrives, his usual bravado is tempered by evident tension, but Tinka, with her reassuring touch and the calming presence of Carmine, helps ease his nerves. They share drinks, creating an atmosphere of trust and companionship, while Tinka emphasizes the significance of fulfilling personal needs and desires during the holiday season, stating her wish for a special Christmas together.

As the evening progresses, the dynamic among Tinka, Drago, Danny, and Carmine intensifies. Tinka finds herself navigating her feelings toward these three men, each of whom has expressed interest in her. Instead of succumbing to pressure, she confidently asserts her autonomy, playfully challenging them to reflect on whether they truly want her in their lives. This interaction is charged with flirtatious energy, hinting at deeper connections and the potential for intimacy.

In a bold act of self-empowerment, Tinka takes charge by making a daring advance toward Danny, fully embracing her sexuality and independence. As

Chapter 15 Summary:

In Chapter 15, the setting is a lively diner where Drago encounters Tinka, Carmine, and Danny, who are deeply engrossed in a discussion about the mounting difficulties of organizing an upcoming event. Tinka, visibly troubled, shares that they are experiencing significant setbacks: food suppliers and caterers have withdrawn their services, and she still hasn't secured a contract for the venue. Danny tries to uplift her spirits, alluding to potential issues with the local Chamber of Commerce—troubles that he inadvertently caused through a previous misunderstanding.

Confidently stepping in, Carmine offers to resolve the issues with the Chamber and even proposes covering the deposit for the venue if necessary, showcasing his willingness to go the extra mile for the group. However, after brainstorming potential solutions, they collectively decide against using Carmine's mansion, acknowledging that it is insufficient for the expected crowd size.

As Tinka articulates her frustration over the lack of a viable venue, Drago feels a surge of empathy for her situation. Moved by her distress, he resolves to help her find a solution. Their interaction culminates in a heartfelt goodbye as Drago leaves for an urgent meeting, signaling his commitment to support Tinka amidst the challenges they face. ### Summary of Chapter 17: Struggles and Despair

In this chapter, the protagonist faces an overwhelming sense of hopelessness as the day of the children's party draws near. With only one day left to prepare, she confronts a daunting array of issues: a shortage of food, decorations, caterers, and even a suitable venue. This mounting pressure triggers self-doubt, leaving her questioning her ability to manage the event's preparations.

In a moment of vulnerability, she reaches out to Carmine, a supportive friend who has been a steady presence throughout her journey. Seeking solace and clarity, she decides to take a walk home to process her thoughts, despite feeling guilty about abandoning her companions. Carmine reassures her, offering his assistance and reflecting his belief in her capability.

Back at her apartment, she attempts to wrap a few presents, but this only deepens her anxiety about gathering enough supplies for the party. She finds herself caught between moments of pride for the effort she is putting in and the nagging fear of failure looming over the celebration.

To connect with the children who will attend, the protagonist calls Angela,

Chapter 17 Summary:

*Drago's Encounter with Farmer Brown*

In this chapter, Drago visits Farmer Brown, who welcomes him with warmth and hospitality. Although invited to stay for a meal, Drago declines, promising to return soon. He informs his friend Danny that the barn can be utilized despite needing repairs, and reassures him that Farmer Brown has a bounty of festive food, including turkey and desserts, ready for the holiday season.

*Concerns about the Farmer's Situation*

Danny, however, raises concerns regarding the farmer's unusually large stock of food so close to Christmas. Drago sheds light on the underlying issues, explaining that Farmer Brown has been marginalized by the local Chamber of Commerce. This situation appears to stem from competition with the Clarkson family, who likely exert influence in the community.

*Plans for the Barn*

In response to the barn's repair timeline, Drago proposes contacting Drill, hoping to set aside past conflicts for the greater good. He articulates the need to support Farmer Brown, especially during the holiday season when needy children depend on community generosity. Drill, echoing Drago's sentiments, shares a parallel tale about another local business facing similar challenges with the Chamber of Commerce, highlighting the economic pressures affecting many in their community.

*Call for Action*

Drago passionately calls for action, urging his fellow bikers to prioritize the welfare of children during Christmas. This fosters a dialogue about community support and the necessity of addressing local hardships. The chapter culminates in a motivating reminder of the collective responsibility to uplift those in need, especially during the festive season, solidifying the bond of community in times of adversity.

Chapter Nineteen Summary

In this chapter, the festive spirit of Christmas comes alive at Farmer Brown's farm, where Tinka and a lively group of bikers gather to prepare for the holiday. The atmosphere is filled with excitement as they decorate the barn with colorful lights and ornaments, transforming it into a winter wonderland. Under the guidance of Candace Brown, the group's enthusiastic leader, everyone joins in singing Christmas carols, fostering a sense of unity and joy among the participants.

As the celebration unfolds, a heartfelt toast is raised to honor Christmas, symbolizing togetherness and community. Tinka, affectionately dubbed “Tinka Belle! Our Christmas angel,” revels in the warmth of her name and the love surrounding her, embracing her identity within the group.

As night falls, the chapter takes a more intimate turn. Tinka shares a meaningful and passionate experience with her closest companions—Drago, Danny, and Carmine. Their interactions are deeply emotional, reflecting the connection they share while highlighting the unique traits that each partner brings to the relationship. The culmination of their intimate evening signifies not just physical pleasure but also emotional closeness among them.

Summary of Chapter 20: Christmas Morning Call

On Christmas morning, Tinka receives an unexpected call from Clarkson, who informs her that the anticipated gathering with the children will not take place. Instead, the bishop has arranged a party at his manse, an alternative that Clarkson insists is more appropriate for the occasion. This news initially dampens Tinka's spirits.

Determined to bring clarity to the situation, Tinka calls Angela to relay the disappointing update. Angela had previously placed her trust in Tinka's assurances that their plans would succeed, and she expresses her genuine disappointment alongside Jack. Nonetheless, they both cling to hope that their Christmas celebration can still flourish.

As Tinka and her friends wait anxiously in the barn, their spirits begin to wane. However, the mood shifts remarkably when the bus arrives, and the children's faces light up with excitement as they pour into the barn. Their joyful entrance signals that, despite setbacks, the day is destined for happiness.

The barn soon comes alive with laughter and festivity as it transforms into a vibrant party venue. Children revel in exhilarating rides on Harley motorcycles, interacting with friendly bikers who generously serve an array of delicious food. A group of musicians adds to the festive atmosphere, filling the space with cheerful melodies. After enjoying a sumptuous meal, the children eagerly join in singing carols, their voices harmonizing in celebration.

The highlight of the day arrives as each child receives carefully chosen gifts, including toys and bicycles, which further elevates the joy of the occasion. The laughter, warmth, and camaraderie create an unforgettable Christmas celebration. In the end, the barn is left in excellent condition, prepared for future events, and bolstered by new orders from local motorcycle clubs, ensuring that the spirit of community will continue to thrive.
